GOOD COMPANY VETERINARY

Good day, bad day.

Put this on the fridge. At the end of each day, write a G or a B in the box. Don't overthink it: did they eat, did they get up, did they seem like themselves?

When the B's start to outnumber the G's, or you can't remember the last G, it's time to talk. That's all this is for.

Good days this month: _____ Bad days: _____

A few things that count as a bad day: not eating, not getting up to greet you, hiding, panting or restlessness at night, accidents in the house, not wanting to be touched. A good day is simply a day they seemed like themselves.
